LEAVE FROM WORK AFTER A REPRODUCTIVE LOSS

FACT SHEET

Civil Rights Department
STATE OF CALIFORNIA

The Fair Employment and Housing Act (FEHA), enforced by the Civil Rights Department (CRD), protects the right of most California employees to take up to five days of leave from work after a reproductive loss. This fact sheet discusses who is eligible to take reproductive loss leave, when they can take it, how much leave is available to them, and whether they can get paid while they are out. It also covers protections against retaliation related to reproductive loss leave and what an employee can do if their employer does not follow the law. For more information, see Government Code section 12945.6.

DEFINITIONS

A reproductive loss event is any of the following:

- Miscarriage
- Stillbirth
- Failed adoption – for example, if a birth mother or legal guardian breaches or dissolves an adoption agreement, or if an adoption is not finalized for another reason
- Failed surrogacy – for example, if a surrogate breaches or dissolves a surrogacy agreement, or if an embryo transfer fails
- Unsuccessful assisted reproduction – for example, a failed intrauterine insemination or embryo transfer

ELIGIBILITY

- Employees who work for public employers of any size – or private employers with five or more employees – and have worked for the employer for at least 30 days before taking leave are eligible.
- An employee can take leave following their own reproductive loss event or that of another person – such as a spouse or partner – if the employee would have been the parent of the child born or adopted.
- It is against the law for an employer to interfere with or deny an employee's right to take leave after a reproductive loss if they meet the above criteria.

TIMING AND DURATION OF LEAVE

The law requires employers to provide eligible employees with a minimum of five days of leave for a reproductive loss event. Employees can, but do not have to, take their leave days consecutively. This means they can choose to take all five days at once or break up the days over a longer period, as long as their leave is completed within three months of the reproductive loss event.

If an employer has an existing leave policy that applies to reproductive loss events, the employee must take reproductive loss leave according to that policy. An employer's policy may provide for more leave than the legally required minimum.

When a single reproductive loss event occurs over several days, the law treats it as one event.

If an employee experiences more than one reproductive loss event in a year, they are entitled to no more than 20 days of reproductive loss leave in that one-year period unless an individual employer's leave policy provides for more time.

Reproductive loss leave is separate from, and in addition to, other types of leave to which employees are entitled. Examples include, leave to care for one's own serious health condition or that of certain family members available under the California Family Rights Act (CFRA) and Family and Medical Leave Act (FMLA), or leave for disabilities related to pregnancy or childbirth available under FEHA. If an employee is on another type of leave during the reproductive loss event, they can take reproductive loss leave within three months of finishing the other form of leave.

PAY DURING REPRODUCTIVE LOSS LEAVE

Some employers have paid leave policies that cover reproductive losses. Employers that do not have an applicable paid leave policy must let employees use any available vacation time, sick days, personal days, or PTO to cover their reproductive loss leave so they can get paid. Otherwise, reproductive loss leave may be unpaid.

RIGHT TO CONFIDENTIALITY

In general, employers are required to keep confidential any information an employee provides when exercising their right to reproductive loss leave. Employers are, however, allowed to disclose this information when required by law or to internal personnel or legal counsel when necessary. The law does not require an employee to submit documentation in support of their leave request.

UNLAWFUL RETALIATION

It is against the law for an employer to retaliate against an employee who exercises their right to reproductive loss leave. This means an employer cannot fire, demote, fine, suspend, discipline, or otherwise discriminate against someone for requesting or taking reproductive loss leave.

In addition, an employer cannot retaliate against an employee for testifying about their own – or someone else's – reproductive loss leave during a legal proceeding involving this right.

FILING A COMPLAINT

If an employee thinks their employer violated their right to reproductive loss leave, or retaliated against them in relation to this type of leave, they have three years to file a complaint with CRD. CRD will issue a right-to-sue so the employee can pursue their case in civil court. They cannot file an employment discrimination lawsuit in court without receiving a right-to-sue from CRD. CRD may also investigate the complaint.

If, after an investigation, CRD finds reasonable cause that the employer broke the law, it may require the parties to go to mediation in order to try reach a settlement and, if the complaint can't be settled, CRD may file a lawsuit on behalf of the employee. Possible remedies include:

- Forcing the employer to change its policies or practices
- Getting the worker hired or re-hired
- Requiring the employer to undergo training
- Damages (money) for emotional distress

An employee can file a complaint in one of three ways:

- Online by creating an account and using our interactive California Civil Rights System (CCRS)
- By mail using a printable intake form
- By calling our communication center at 800.884.1684 (Toll Free), 800.700.2320 (TTY), or California's Relay Service at 711

CRD can provide reasonable accommodations for people with disabilities during the complaint process.
